

Cantata "Kindly fate" [n. V – Book 2]

Soprano

J. C. Pepusch (1667-1752)

[1.] Affettuoso - Adagio - Affettuoso

6 Adagio
Kind

8 Affettuoso
ly Kindly fate at length re-

11
lease me, life has nothing now can please me, since Co-rinna flights my 13

pain - since Corinna flights my 15

pain. Kindly

19
fate at length release me life has nothing now can please me since Co-

21
rinna flights my pain - since Corinna flights my 23

pain - since Corinna flights my 25

pain. Hope a -

28
while may make us languish and indulge the flat'ring anguish but de-

30
spair soon breaks our chain

32 D.C.
but despair soon breaks our chain.

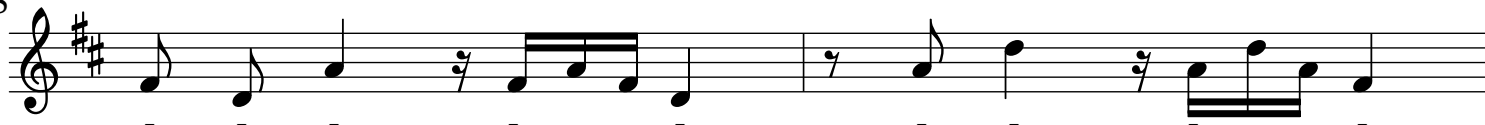

[2.] Recit

Thus to his Lyre the drooping Swain, did of the cruel Nymph com-plain, and Zephirs wasted thro' the Grove, the murmurs of his hapless Love; The Queen who favours soft desire, and kindles ev'ry am'rous fire, wing'd down her flight the Swain to Chear, and warbled comfort in his Ear.

[3.] Allegro

Aria
 Rouse, rouse, rouse, and Conquest lies before you, lies before you, Passion will the Nymph disarm, disarm - Pas - sion will the Nymph disarm Rouse, rouse, rouse, and Conquest lies before you, Rouse, rouse, rouse, and Conquest lies before you, Passion will the Nymph disarm

38

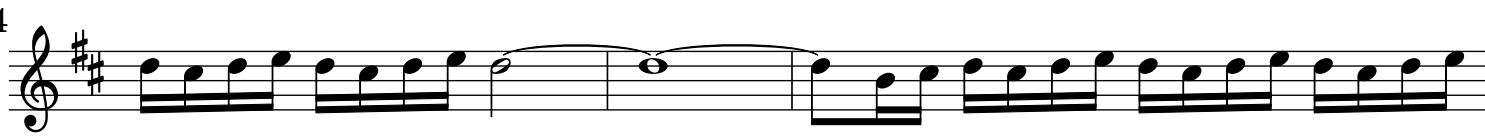

40

42

44

47

Passion will the 50

Nymph dis - arm the Nymph the Nymph disarm

52

Passion will the Nymph dis - arm the 54

Nymph the Nymph disarm

62

In pursuit of Love and glory, Bold attempts alone can 65

Charm, bold attempts a - lone can charm -

68

bold attempts alone can

71

charm - bold attempts alone can Charm.

D.C.